ANDERSON

WINS; SCORE IS 24 TO 21

GREENCASTLE HIGH SCHOOL BASKET BALL TEAM GOES DOWN IN HARD-FOUGHT GAME AT 11 O'CLOCK SATURDAY MORNING

WAS A FAST CLOSE GAME

BLOOMINGTON, March 12.—After having met and defeated Martinsville and South Bend, two of the highly touted basketball fives entered in the state tournament, the fighting Five representing Greencastle was defeated in the 10 o'clock game Saturday morning by the fast Anderson Five, by a score of 24 to 21.

The game was one of the closest and hardest fought of the tournament the Greencastle five fighting desperately to win its way into the semifinals. The first half ended 16 to 25 in favor of Anderson and the Greencastle boys lacked just a little of the needed punch to put them over as winners.

Coming to Bloomington, virtually un-noted and unheralded, the Greencastle quintet made itself famous by defeating the much touted Martinsville team in its first game. Then they began to sit up and take notice of the college town boys who proved that they were not bloomers by repeating with a win over the strong South Bend Five.

Then came Anderson, always mentioned as a contender for state honors. And Anderson was given the score of its life and barely nosed out a win.

The Greencastle quintet is the official "done speller" and most talked of five of the tournament. Each boy on the team deserves great praise for his work in the tournament.

Master, a regular forward was ill, and unable to play in the Anderson game, Stoner playing in his place.

Roy Hillis, who is employed in the Greencastle Water Works office is rapidly improving from an attack of influenza. Mr. Hillis expects to be back in the office again next week.

The body of Dr. William Sheridan, Chicago minister who died in that city last Wednesday after a long illness of paralysis will be brought to Greencastle where it will be taken to the home of Dr. H. A. Gobin. The funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at College Avenue Church, Bishop Quayle, Bishop Nicholson, and President G. R. Grosso will conduct the services.

Prof. F. C. Tilden of this city will speak in the First Congregational church of Terre Haute tomorrow morning.

The fire department made a run at 11 o'clock Friday night to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Gardner, who reside on Park street when neighbors saw the blue burning out and turned in the alarm. The house did not catch fire and fortunately no damage was done.

The Home Steam Laundry has been closed since Friday night because of some of the flues in the boiler being burned out. The damage will be repaired today and the laundry will be in operation again Monday morning.

Mrs. James L. Randel went to Terre Haute Friday to spend the day with her sister, Miss Harriett Gautier and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Randel.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Webster of Watertown, N. D., are the parents of an eight-pound son, born this week. Mr. Webster is a former Greencastle boy being the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Webster.

Elizabeth Grantham of this city this morning received a message telling him of the death of his brother Farley Grantham, age 36 in Mattoon, Ill. Mr. Grantham is not the only surviving one a family of 11 children all of his brothers and sisters being dead. Mr. Grantham is 91 years old. Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Allee of Putnamville spent the day in Greencastle.

"WE ARE WITH YOU."

SAYS MARTINSVILLE

There's no joy in this town, "mighty Casey has struck out."

In other words, Greencastle did the unexpected and "bumped" Martinsville at the state tournament Thursday afternoon, winning by a score of 20 to 16. They out-played Martinsville throughout the entire game, and they won on their merits. Here's to you, Greencastle. You are happy over the victory, and we don't begrudge you one bit of pleasure. Go to it, and win the state championship; we're with you.

Greencastle won by getting the jump on our boys, and by consistent playing held the lead at all times. Martinsville never was in the lead, although the boys tied the score at 16, and it seemed then that they might get back to their old-time victory-winning form and pull through but it was not to be, and a big bunch of disappointed Martinsville rooters heard the final pistol crack with the home boys on the short end of the score.

There are no alibis for the defeat, although the local boys are said to have had "stage fright," not that they feared Greencastle, for they did not, but the crowd and the surroundings got their "goat," and they were unable to get together.

The defeat of Martinsville was as much of a surprise to the big crowd of fans at the tournament from all over the state as it was to the Martinsville fans. The betting, what little there was of it, was all one way—five to one on Martinsville, or odds like that. But the best laid plans of mice and men oft go astray and so it was in this case.—Martinsville Re-Porter.

DEDICATION OF TABERNACLE BY REV. H. L. WARD

FIRST SERVICES HELD IN NEWLY CONSTRUCTED BUILDING IS HELD FRIDAY EVENING—ABOUT 100 PRESENT TO HEAR ADDRESS—MRS. BARR IS PRAISED

FIRST REVIVAL SUNDAY NIGHT

More than 100 persons attended the dedication of the Daisy Barr tabernacle, in which a six-weeks series of revivals, under the auspices of the United Churches of Greencastle will begin Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock on Friday evening.

Although the building was damp and cold and not completed, the meeting was a successful and enjoyable one. The Rev. Clippinger of the Locust Street church gave the scripture lesson and the Rev. Blaine Kirkpatrick made the dedicatory prayer, while the Rev. H. L. Ward of Franklin, gave the address of the evening.

The Rev. Ward, who has gone through three campaigns with Mrs. Barr spoke most flatteringly of her ability as a leader, speaker and pastor. He stated that he believed her to be superior to Billy Sunday as an evangelist and praised the people of the community for securing her and for building the tabernacle.

Regarding this latter he said that his experience has taught him that revivals held in tabernacles were much more effective than those held in the churches, as the tabernacle appealed to all classes of people and that God and religion were given greater thought in a crudely built building than in a comfortable and beautifully decorated church.

The Rev. Ward took as his text: "Go out into the by-ways and edges and Compel Them to Come In," from Luke 14. His talk was a forceful and instructive.

Announcement was made that the choir rehearsal would be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

BLOOMINGTON, March 13.—

Greencastle's scrap with the Benders Friday afternoon was the greatest defensive contest of the tournament. Both teams employed the five man defense and both worked it to perfection, not a close shot being garnered in the entire game by either side. The college town five stepped into the front in the opening half for a ten-point lead, due mainly to the great shooting of Allen, before the losers scored. Allen counted a free throw for the opener and within seven minutes had tossed in three field goals. The work of this center brought the Greencastle stand into an uproar and it looked like a gone battle for South Bend. York added a field goal for the winners before Nyikos counted from the field and followed with a free throw for South Bend. A long field goal by Odell closed the scoring for the period, Greencastle leading, 10 to 5.

Play for the first five minutes of the second half showed some of the greatest defensive work of the tournament, neither side being able to get close to their goals, while the long shots were falling wide. Wahl connected for the first point of the half, but a trio of markers by J. Hirt, Allen and York, in quick succession soon put Greencastle in the lead never to be endangered.

Allen and J. Hirt, as a center and floor guard, were the factors in the Greencastle victory. Both men are tall and rangy and cover the floor well. The lineup and summary follow: Greencastle, 17 South Bend, 12.

DOPE FROM BLOOMINGTON

Tech is given a fifty-fifty chance with Jefferson today. Greencastle is expected to give Anderson a great battle, but fans continue to hold the up-Monon aggregation from a dope edge.

All Greencastle turned out for the South Bend game, following the great showing of its squad against Martinsville yesterday. Coach Smith was hauling a young packet of congratulatory telegrams with him last evening.

ABOUT CONNUBIAL FELICITY

Marriage is a Good Old Institution in Spite of the Knockers.

If we believed all that we read in novels we should be sorry for all the world, and especially for the married people. Novelists go to any amount of trouble to get folk married in order to make them miserable. In a novel not a love story, but a real novel, there is usually something about the husband that gets on the wife's nerves or something about the wife that gets on the husband's nerves. It may be the way he eats an orange, or his views on feminism, or the way she deals cards, or her ideas on bringing up the children—whatever it is, the novelist makes the most of it until he has himself and his married people and all the rest of us unhappy about it. As a matter of fact, you and I have every reason to believe that he does not know what he is talking about, or at least is not talking about what he knows. Marriages may or may not be made in heaven, they may or may not make a sort of heaven, but they are, for the most part, comfortable and satisfactory affairs. If you consider your friends and neighbors who will be convinced that almost everybody is married to the right person. If you try to mix them up you will find that it cannot be done. Mrs. A. never could make waffles to suit Mr. B. and Mrs. C. would not like the way Mr. D. trots around in a bathrobe in the mornings, and Mrs. C. is too extravagant for Mr. A. and Mr. and Mrs. D. like the same sort of shows and music and books, and so it goes. Trifles of differences in habits and tastes do not seem to affect the congeniality of most husbands and wives, and, indeed, these differences seem to exist in remarkably few cases. There are exceptions, but the point is that they are exceptions. If proof were needed of the fact that domestic felicity is rather a common sort of thing, the conversation of a woman's afternoon card club would be convincing. What do they talk about? They talk about their husbands and their homes and their babies. They actually do! My husband likes this and mine likes that, and my husband says this and mine says that, and so on it goes all around the room, and each one there is more interested in what her husband likes and says than in the recitals of the others. It is a pleasant thing to contemplate, and it is going on all the time, in spite of the three-cornered ideas of misery that the authors delight in.—Indianapolis News.

Her Victory

By LYNN ROBY MEEKINS

"Beautiful?" said George Wilcox to his sister Elisabeth. "It doesn't even begin to do her justice!"

"Oh, we who know her well forget about her good looks, you know," said Elisabeth airily. "She is a great deal more than pretty. She has brains. Yes, indeed. Hello has brains."

"Why in the world do you apply such a diabolical name to so angelic a person?" he asked.

"That easy," she explained. "Her name is Heloise, but that was too long for her classmates; so after a due consideration we took the first part of it and called her Heloise. Sometimes, for short, we hailed her as the 'Telephone Girl.'"

"You'll keep her the whole summer, won't you?"

"If I can; but she says she is going after two weeks."

For several years Elisabeth Wilcox had been telling her family of the beauty and charm of her classmate, Heloise Waring, but she had never been able to get her to the Wilcox home for a visit. Both graduated, and then both took the post graduate course, so that now they were quite in society and very much up in the affairs of the world.

When Heloise Waring entered the Wilcox home, within a day she had captivated everybody in it with her loveliness and her liveliness. The inevitable came with a rush. George Wilcox, staid young business man though he was, and the working member of his father's rich firm, did not allow two weeks to elapse before he spoke. He did it in a blunt, manly fashion that should have won any ordinary woman's heart; but Heloise Waring was an extraordinary one.

She told him how she appreciated his compliment, how much honored she felt and how deeply she regretted that she could not say yes.

"You have been very open and honest with me," she went on, "and I think I ought to be as candid with you, although I fear you will not understand me."

They were out driving. Heloise paused a moment until the horses had crossed a bridge and entered upon a stretch of smooth road. "You have millions. All about you is wealth until I fairly gasp at the abundance of it. My family—well, a church mouse would be an elephant compared with our family. I got my education through the kindness of a rich relative. Everything I have in the way of dress and costly pleasure is from the same excellent uncle—everything, until I feel as though I were a breathing exhibit of faith, hope and charity, the greatest of these being charity."

George Wilcox tried to say something but somehow the words would not get in proper shape.

"Now I have my education," she continued calmly, "and I want to do something with it. If I should become your wife, all these debts of honor which rest upon me might be paid; but don't you see that it would be merely transferring the consciousness that haunts me day and night? You would get a charity wife."

"Money is the very smallest question in this matter," he said.

"For you it is. For me it is so big that it fills all space. But really we must not quarrel about it. The facts are as I have said, and at present I am immovable. And," she added quickly, "I've told you things that your sister does not know. I think she considers me rich. Probably all the other girls at the university had the same idea. It's the habit of our tribe to act as millionaires even when the cupboard is empty; so I'm sure I need not ask you to keep what I have told you in confidence."

"It will be sacred, and I shall love you all the more. And another thing, you have not said that you will say no. Your reply, you remember, was that you regretted you could not say yes. Please let the proposition stay as it is. As we say in business, let it remain open for a month or so."

"Oh, you have my answer, my explanation, and my thanks," she said.

III

When Heloise reached home Robert Day drove her from the station, but he did not seem to interest her as he once did. Their old place seemed more run down than before, but it interested her more than ever.

Robert Day was the local lawyer and real estate man. He was always going to do big things with the Waring estate, including the marrying of Heloise. Meanwhile he posed as the leading light of the neighborhood, and was satisfied with his greatness.

"What have you done for the place?" asked Heloise.

"What can you do? You can't take it to town and put it up like butter or a cow, can you?" Day always resented this question of Miss Waring's and answered it about the same way each time.

"Yes, I think you can," she replied. He stood open-mouthed as she proceeded: "Until further notice I wish to take the place out of your hands and to manage it myself. I have consulted with my family, and they have not only had he usurped the expected man's place, but his errand as well. Evidently, both had the same end in view. Ford was interviewing him in the other's absence, for the very part he so much desired.

If he had been able to observe the thorough scrutiny he was undergoing, he would have realized that the demand for music was a pretense. After a while Ford remarked quietly:

"You'll do!"

Leicester felt unable to reply. He owed it to the other man to explain, of Ford would only give him the opportunity.

"It was with serious misgivings that I told Smithers I would see you," Ford was beginning when Leicester in a determined manner broke in.

"Before you go any further, Mr. Ford, I must tell you that you have made a mistake. I am not the man you were expecting, and I am not here because you sent for me. Apparently I happened to call just at the time you had appointed and I was taken for him. The strangest part of it is that I, too, am an actor, and came to ask for the part which I think he must have been intended."

"Rather a mixed-up state of affairs!" Ford replied. "If you act the part as well as you look it, you are the man I want. Do you know, I have been looking for the right man—a typical young American—for weeks! The man I expected today was one my manager has been urging me to try for days past. Without even knowing the fellow, I feel sure I shouldn't like him. I'm glad that he failed to keep the appointment, or that Smithers couldn't find him—whatever it was that prevented his coming. It will give me great pleasure to phone that self-satisfied manager of mine that I shall not need his protégé, as I have already found a most satisfactory man for the part."

"Would you mind telling me the name of the unlucky fellow whom I am supplanting?" asked Leicester.

"An obscure man," replied Ford, "by the name of Leicester—Miles Leicester."

Got the Earth

Some months ago excavations were being made for new tracks on the line of a certain famous railway. At one point a nearby resident obtained permission to remove a quantity of turf to resod his premises, the section boss being instructed to notify the excavating "gang" when the resident should have secured all he desired.

The "Hibernian's" report is as follows: "The man that wanted the earth has got it."

Not to Drink

Strickland Gillilan, the lecturer and the man who pole-vaulted into fame by his "Off Ag'in, on Ag'in, Finnegan" verses, was about to deliver a lecture in a small Missouri town. He asked the chairman of the committee whether he might have a small pitcher of ice water on the platform table.

"To drink?" queried the committee-man.

"No," answered Gillilan. "I do a high-diving act."

Returned the Envelope

The treasurer of the Newburyport waterworks sent out his annual bills one year by mail. In the corner of the envelope was the customary request: "After five days return to Newburyport waterworks, Newburyport, Mass." What was his surprise to have a woman come into his office five days afterward and pass him an empty envelope, with the remark: "Here is your envelope, but what you want of it is more than I can see."

Nell—Eliza went to an astrologer to find out when was the best time to get married.

Stell—What did he tell her?

Nell—He took one look at her and told her to grab her first chance.

Wine, Woman and Song

(From Judge)

A man called upon a physician for advice. The physician diagnosed the case as one of nerves and prescribed accordingly. The fee was five dollars and the prescription two dollars. The man had only five dollars. He said to the physician:

"Doc, five dollars is all I have. Lend me two dollars and I'll have the prescription filled."

The physician gazed at the man for a moment, then said, "I have made a mistake in my diagnosis. Your nerve is all right. You are afflicted with an enlarged gall. There is no remedy for that."

Notes and Comment

Of Interest to Women Readers

NOVEL USE FOR OLD CASTER.

With Tiny Thumb Pots Filled With Ferns It Is An Ornament.

Here's a new one for the woman who entertains a mania for inventing uses for useless objects. The old silver caster which stands in the attic is not exactly useless, to be sure, for it has come back into vogue again. But by this time most of its appointments are missing and few house-keepers care to use it for its original purpose.

The inventive soul, who has found a use for it, recommends cleaning it up with a mixture of whiting and ammonia and furnishing it with tiny thumb pots filled with ferns. This, she insists, makes an impressive ornament.

Whether impressive or not, it is very possible to believe that the fine tracery of the ferns against the polished silver would be attractive and that it would make a pretty centerpiece for the dinner table.

Washing Vails.

Tulle vails that have become limp may be renovated by pressing them with a warm iron, having first placed a handkerchief between the iron and the tulle. Lace vails and scarfs should be soaked in a strong lather of white soap and soft water and allowed to simmer gently in a saucepan over a fire for about twenty minutes.

The vails should be lifted out and squeezed tightly, but not rubbed, then rinsed out in cold water. The second lot of water should be faintly tinged with blue and have in it a small quantity of hot starch. Clear the vails of any particles of the starch by clipping well between the hands; then pin on a clean white cloth and allow to dry. In this manner they will look as fresh and clean as when new, and they may be washed any number of times. Vails should always be ironed with a handkerchief or piece of fine linen between as they are much better and wear longer if they do not come in direct contact with the iron.

Dinner Tables.

Smaller dinner tables are now in vogue.

The why of this is, that vegetable dishes and other serving dishes are seldom placed thereon.

They are being relegated more and more to serving tables at the side.

In this way a large table is no longer necessary, and even for large families they are smaller than formerly.

With the fashion of serving everything, even roast, from the side, it is possible to decorate the table more effectively and to have it remain slightly throughout the meal.

Why They're Short.

"Marriage, said George Ade, at a dinner in New York, "is a wonderful thing."

Mr. Ade laughed a cynical bachelor's laugh.

"Marriage," he went on, "changes people so. I met a man the other day who had recently married and he looked so different that I said:

"Why my boy, I thought you were tall. But you're shorter than when I saw you last. You are actually short now."

"Yes, I am short," he returned. "I'm married and settled down, you know."

Tips on Ironing.

Iron lace embroidery on the wrong side only.

Iron frills, lace, bands, sleeves and collars first.

Iron the main part last, being very careful not to crease the work already done.

Iron fine silks and muslin through a piece of cambric.

Iron handkerchiefs and serviettes whilst they are quite damp, finishing in the center.

Iron body linen on the right side only and table linen both sides, wrong side first.

To Utilize Pieces of Soap.

Small pieces of toilet soap should be saved from the soap dishes, and when a sufficient quantity has been collected it should be cut into shavings and dissolved in boiling water. Measure the soap, and to each cupful put two cupfuls of water. When the soap is dissolved, add enough fine oatmeal to make a stiff batter. The mixture is then turned into molds, and when dry makes an excellent soap for the skin.

Brush the Eye Brows.

Brushing the brows several times a day in the direction in which they should grow will prevent them from growing together. It is possible for you to have the superfluous hairs removed with the tweezers though the hairs usually grow again.

Keep The Shoulders Straight.

A splendid exercise for keeping the shoulders straight is to lie flat on the floor, face down, and raise the body, keeping it rigid all the while, on the hands and toes. Perform this exercise twice a day.

When crocheting and one has no pockets to hold the ball or spool of cotton or yarn, take a long hairpin and run through the spool, then stick it into a cushion.

ALL you have to do to know that you are rid of reinsurance trouble for good is to make sure that you get a Still Better Willard with the "Thread Rubber" Trade Mark stamped on the side of the box.

CRIES OF ANIMALS AND BIRDS

Vocal Effects Which Startle Persons Unfamiliar With Dumb Brutes.

The human voice, with all its modulations and inflections, is a wonderful thing, yet it is imitated closely by birds and animals.

The effect produced by these upon persons who hear them for the first time is one in which astonishment and unguessed are blended.

A species of crow in India has a note which exactly resembles the human voice in loud laughing.

The Australian bird called the "laughing jackass," when warning his feathered mates that daybreak is at hand, utters a cry resembling a troop of boys shouting, whooping, and laughing in a wild chorus.

The nightjar has a cry like one lamenting in distress.

Among birds that have the power of imitation the parrot is the best known; but, as a matter of fact, its voice is decidedly inferior to that of the mina, a species of starling. Curiously enough, the male bird speaks in a high, clear tone, like that of a child, while the female has a gruff voice.

Another bird of Australia, the morepork, is frequently heard vehemently demanding more pork, in a clear, stentorian voice.

One whippoorwill also demands his punishment in a distinct imitation of the human voice, and the command of the guinea fowl to come back could easily be mistaken for a human voice.

Coming to quadrupeds, the cries of none approach more closely that of the human voice than those of the seals when lamenting the loss of their young.

The cry of a wounded hare resembles that of a child in distress, while the familiar back-fence wall of the common cat sometimes starts with its sound of a human infant's cry.

A Medium Exposed.

A former grocer in England who turned "medium" has been exposed. A darkened room was necessary to him, and also one particular chair. It was discovered that he carried the necessary apparatus for making

"ghosts" in a cabinet in the back of that chair. In the dark it was comparatively easy for him, aided by a dummy head and other accessories, to pose as a spirit. The make-up consisted of a mask of China silk, which fitted over his head, a paper mask, a piece of black cloth and a black sleeve, a wire coat-hanger, an iron hook, one or two wigs, an electric flashlight, and a few yards of wire. The "ghost" disappeared and reappeared by raising and lowering the black cloth, which was, of course, invisible in the dark.

Splitting Granite With Air.

The expansive force of compressed air is employed in a very interesting way by a North Carolina granite company. On a sloping hillside, composed of granite which shows no bed planes, but splits readily in any direction when started, a three inch bore is sunk about eight feet deep, and the bottom is enlarged by exploding half a stick of dynamite.

A small charge of powder is fired in this hole, which starts a horizontal cleavage. Charges increasing in size are exploded until the cleavage has extended over a radius of 75 or 100 feet. Then a pipe is cemented into the bore, and air is forced in, under a pressure of from 80 to 100 pounds. The expansion of the air extends the cleavage until it comes out at the surface on the slope of the hill. A horizontal sheet of granite several acres in extent may thus be separated.

Keeping Cool By Stoves.

A popular article of household furniture among Americans in the Philippines is said to be the "refrigerating stove." This stove is designed to keep people cool instead of hot. Just as we heat our houses in the States in winter with coal stoves so the wanderer who has set up housekeeping in the Philippines cools his house with a cold stove.

These cold stoves are made to look something like an ordinary stove and, being fed with ammonia and chemicals, give out radiations of cold waves instead of heat. One can imagine a family gathering around the refrigerating stove for coolness on a hot night in the Philippines, just as on a cold night in the States they had been accustomed to gather around the parlor stove for warmth.

China's Mania for Railroads.

Hardly a province of China has escaped the recent mania for railways, and if all the lines projected are carried out some of the remotest parts of the Empire will be rendered easy of access by the iron road.

DR. OSBORN'S IMPROVED METHODS ARE EXCLUSIVELY HIS OWN, AND THERE IS NO GUESSWORK ABOUT IT—THEY HAVE PROVEN SUCCESSFUL

In the treatment and cure "Without the use of the knife" of Piles, Fistula, Fissure, Prostatic Enlargement, Rupture, Chronic Diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder, Obstruction, Rheumatism, Stomach Bowels and all other curable Chronic Diseases.

No Matter How Obsolete or How Contracted—Cured.

When I say I can cure you you can depend upon it, for I know from the successful results in thousands of similar cases to yours just what I can accomplish. Grateful patients treated by me are constantly recommending others, and this is why I possess such a large practice.

Men! Women! If you do less than you should, on your farm, at your desk or in your shop, you are in some way weak. If you can't accomplish all that you expect or hope for, you are the silent sufferer from some hidden disease that affects one or more of the important nerve centers of the body. These neglected or unknown conditions are usually diseases of the Pelvic System, which reflexly act upon the organs of elimination, digestion and the nervous system, which in turn has its influence upon the brain. I have made a special study of the nervous system, and have perfected methods that will cure where ordinary methods have failed. I will give you a searching and thorough examination FREE, thus determining the exact location of your trouble.

PEAR IN MIND that I have in Indianapolis one of the most modern and thoroughly equipped offices in the state with a Specialist in charge who is ripe in years of experience, rich and mature in learning in his chosen work. That neither one of us will promise you more than we can give, and should you be unable to see me on date specified above, you can write, or better still call at my home office, 214 Traction Terminal Building, Indianapolis.

I do not use the knife. Neither do I do any cutting.

Tomorrow May Never Come—Get in Touch With Me Today.

ARE YOU RUPTURED?

No ruptured man, woman or child need be told of the suffering and agony resulting from the neglect of this awful affliction, nor of your many disappointments and failure to find a cure by experimenting with old-fashioned treatments, leaving you the sufferer in even worse condition than before, and mentally skeptical of ever being cured.

Every ruptured person in Indiana who calls to see me is entitled to a Free Trial of the

WOULD REVIVE THE FAMILY AS UNIT

Church Heads Seek to Stimulate Common Interest and Offset Too Much Individualism.

Saving the American family from "over-emphasized individualism" is announced as a leading purpose of the New World Movement of Northern Baptists.

"There is too much talk of living one's own life and too little of the unit good," said Dr. H. A. Heath of the General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention. "It is an unusual family that has any vital common interest."

To unify the family in its church life at least 10,000 Baptist churches throughout the country are being reorganized on the basis of what is known as the Family Group Plan. Every local church of the denomination in the Northern states will be divided into family groups, with not more than ten families in a group; a leader will be appointed, and the various group leaders, with the pastor, will form a church cabinet to put local and denominational programs into effect.

"Family Sunday" will be observed at least once each three months in all the Baptist churches in the country. Everything about the services, songs, text and sermon, will be chosen from the point of view of interesting the family. Members of the family will be asked to sit together, and in thousands of rows of seats in the United States father will head the row and tow-head son will occupy the end seat.

Christian leaders say that family prayers are held at the present time in not more than one out of every ten families of church members. The Baptist campaign will make an effort to revive the custom in all the homes of that denomination.

The various members of each family group in the church will be expected to entertain each other in their homes. Since these divisions will be made without reference to social status, perhaps on an alphabetical basis or in some other equally impartial way, this will mean a real test of Christian democracy. The leaders believe that the members of the various congregations will come through this acid test triumphantly.

"Brotherhood ought to be an actual working principle in our churches and not an idle word," Dr. Heath said. "If it is not an actual working principle this is the time for us to find it out. If there is Christian selfishness it should be exposed. But, as a matter of fact, the Family Group Plan is being tried out in our churches, and families write in that they welcome this opportunity to mingle with those of varying viewpoints."

Family week-end meetings will also be introduced into many local Baptist churches, at which the various members of the family will come together for readings, recitations, music, games and chat. These programs will not necessarily be religious at all, the church leaders say. The church can safely be used for family enjoyment in these modern times, they declare.

Dr. Heath contends that this reorganization of the church on the family basis is both wise and natural.

"The family is the natural division within the church as well as outside of it," he said. "The Baptist Church is simply recognizing this fact in the New World Movement. If the movement results in a stronger welding of family ties and in helping to settle the national discontent through the mingling of various classes the church, the home and the nation will all be the better for it."

BOY SCOUTS HELP TAME WILD TRIBE

Kavali, Madras Presidency, India, Jan. 10.—Under the direction of the British Indian Government American Baptist missionaries are adapting occidental methods in educating and otherwise making good citizens of one of the so-called criminal tribes of India. This tribe, known as the Erukals, is made up of what in another country could be called gypsies or brigands and has been rounded up by the government into this region.

The "wild" men and women of the tribe are being taught to work, and the boys and girls of the tribe are put in school with other children of this place. The "criminals," as they are called, number two-thirds of the enrollment in the school. Exhibitions from time to time of the work of the pupils brought out a procession of the Erukals, and the sight of one of their children reciting in a class was a source of intense pleasure.

So responsive have the Erukals boys proven that a parent was given recently dealing with the Great War. Several government officials who were present at the pageant were surprised at the discipline.

Discipline has been added by the introduction of the Boy Scout movement. The Head Master of the Kavali School first took the training in Madras, and then he put some twenty of the boys through the training. The administering of the Scout's oath and the presentation of staves and scout handkerchiefs was an unique event and was attended by several officials. This is the only troop in the Madras Presidency that has boys from the criminal tribes in it.

AGENTS

The "lady agent" always gets me, whatever junk she has for sale; with skillful tongue she soothes and pets me and blarneys me and draws the kale.

The gent who sells the works of Dickens, in eighty-seven cloth-bound books, pursues in vain; but, ah! the chickens—I can't escape their velvet books. I often vow, "Henceforth the ladies in vain will seek my humble home; I'll see the whole fair tribe in laces before I'll buy another time! Too long, with language false and flabby they have beset me on my way. I've bought the works of Laura Libbey, and also those of Bertha Clay; a five-foot shelf of old Nick Carter now ornaments my cozy den. Methinks the maidens must be smarter, if they can work me once again."

I grimly fame this resolution, that's viewed with pleasure by the frau, and pass around some elocution about my adamantiae vow.

And thus, with resolute laden, I to my musty office go, to which there comes a beaming maiden, who sells the works of Edgar Poe.

"It's no use," I firmly greet her. "The stuff is off—I will not buy." Where at her smile grows all the sweeter, and humor twinkles in her eye. Ah, why is man so weak and washy when round his chair fair damsels trot? I know I'll buy those volumes boshy, e'en while I tell her I will not. I always fall for female friskers, I still surrender to their snares, where I would take a man with whiskers and kick his person down the stairs.

My words don't daunt her or frighten her, although I say, "Can't deal with you! I've bought the works of every writer that ever lived, and then a few! I have the works of Pope and Shelley, of Rex E. Beach and Richard Roe; I've Zola's books—they're rather smelly; I draw the line at Edgar Poe. I hate to raise this sort of holler when you come up here peddling rhyme, but I will give you half a dollar if you will let me off this time."

In vain, in vain! She smiles and twitters and lays a volume on my knee; I know I'll have to take my blisters before she will consent to flee. She talks about the text and printing, but I am thinking of the way Dame Nature does her fairest tinting on damsels young and blithe and gay. She talks about the illustrations, but I am thinking how a maid can rattle kings and shatter nations, if she has eyes the proper shade. She talks about the leather binding, but I am looking at her hair, which like a rope of gold is winding above her forehead low and fair.

I might fill up a dozen columns about that agent and her charms, but, having bought some thirty volumes, I'll pack them homeward in my arms.—By Walt Mason, from Judge.

BRIEF DECISIONS

The young fool and the old fool have more than years between them.

A peculiarity of certain cranks is that they can not be turned.

A man who is in society and wants to keep in must be continually going out.—Judge.

It's almost as difficult to get a man to change his brand of cigars as it is to get a woman to change her religion.

And many a man's so-called dignified silence is due to the lamentable fact that he doesn't know what to say.

The woman who marries for money usually regrets what she went after—but it's different with a man.

A woman doesn't object to a man's past as much as she does to his present—to some other female.

Men wouldn't care how much their wives talked if they would only use the sign language.

It's so much easier to tell what ought to be done than it is to get busy and do it.

If the silly actions of a man are not due to his being in love they are probably natural.

Why should the man who thinks he is the whole thing try to conceal it? He doesn't.

Don't borrow trouble. Sit tight and more than enough will come along.

It sometimes costs more to neglect a duty than it does to perform it.

Lazy people usually work overtime when it comes to giving advice.

It's easy for a man to fool a woman—if he really wants him to.

The louder a man talks the more he reminds us of a bass drum.

Men love women less than they love to have women love them.

If we could only settle our bills by paying compliments!

The best way to get out of a tight place is to sober up.

The money of a miser never acquires the talk habit.

And some women would rather be married than happy.

The hard part about an easy job is the getting thereof.

Sometimes money talks, but sometimes it stops talk.

There's a lot of dead timber in most family trees.

CROWS GLOFFY IN SHAME

"Birds of Omen" Swagger in Black and Pretend That They Like It.

In all times and countries man has regarded crows with superstitious awe, as birds of omen, the familiars of witches and evil spirits, and the confidants of deities whom they never failed to betray. Odin took them for his heralds and counselors, but could not trust them, and they blabbed the secrets of alhalla. They were the scoundrelmongers of Olympus, and to their evil tongues poor Coroneis owed her death. Indra, in wrath at their talebearing, hurled them down through all the hundred stages of his heaven. They would have disclosed to his enemies the hiding place of Mohammed in the rocks of Thaur, but the dove built her nest, and the spider spun her web to hide it. No bird surely had nobler opportunities and everywhere it proved itself unworthy of its trust.

It was satisfactorily established by the old writers that the crows got their blackness in punishment for their sins. It seems to have been a futile punishment, for there is no living thing that shows in its demeanor less evidence of a repentant spirit. Instead of being ashamed of their blackness, crows, as an Indian writer has said, "swagger in it, and pretend that they chose that exact shade for themselves."

What color crows were before they were smitten black is uncertain. It is a strange fact that they are most closely allied to the jays and magpies, on one hand, and to birds of paradise on the other, so the possibilities are infinite. But the classical legend that they were originally white gains some support from the frequency with which albinos appear among all kinds of crows.

The voice of almost every member of the crow family has in its very harshness an unbirdlike and partly human quality that could not fail to impress the primitive imagination. In spite of the common idea that crows do nothing out of the ordinary, recognized no less than 65 intonations of the raven's voice, each with its special significance. From the rasing "kalk! kalk! kalk!" of the hooded crow, the Swedes have borrowed their fierce cheer, the finest battle cry possessed by any people.

Nearly all the true crows as well as many of their near relatives will pick up more or less of human speech in captivity, and it is sometimes hard to believe that the slyness with which they invest their remarks, their aptness and intonation are altogether accidental.—London Times.
